MASTER Cotton Mather s visit is over. I will write down all that I can recall regarding it, and concerning this godly gentleman whom Aunt Martha likens to Timothy of old, as he also has known and studied the Scriptures from a youth. His father and grandfather were like cities set on a hill in the church of New England, and so far this descendant hath not hidden his light under a bushel. The hesitation which impedes his utterance in the pulpit is noticeable also in private conversation. He oftentimes stammers and delays for the proper word, which does not come readily at his wish. I wonder not at this; his mind is cumbered with much weighty matter, and he hath but a smallish body to carry it withal. But Moses and Paul, Virgil and Demosthenes were stammerers,...
