Do you think he would have, if I had waited to ask him? I believe so. I did not do it as an act of disobedience, said 106 Hugh, and your making it out so is horrid. I thought I was free to take it if I liked, so long as I didn t take much. John sat down by the fire, his face grave and troubled. Hugh, he exclaimed, in a beseeching tone, say you won t be tempted to take it again till father comes home. Oh, Hugh, I would give everything I possess if you hadn t! Hugh was silent. In his present mood he did not feel inclined to promise. Where s the harm? he asked at last. Father trusted us not to take it till we were old enough to judge of its dangers; he said we must take his judgment till then. And how long was that to last? I don t know, but I was quite willing to leave it till then. Hugh, what does our text say, as father is not here? John s voice was low, and his face full of feeling. I hadn t that to look at out there! murmured Hugh. No. Oh, Hugh, say you will not again till they come home? I m sure I wish I had not, now you say so much about it. John, you won t tell the girls? Not the girls; but I must tell Agnes. Then I shan t promise! John was staggered for a...
