TOMBS AND SEPULCHRAL MONUMENTS. Strong vaulted cells where martyr d seors of old Far in the rocky walls of Zion sleep; Green terraces, and arched fountains cold, Where lies the cypruss shade so still and deep. Th unearthly thoughts havo passed from earth away, As fast as evening sunbeams from the sea. Tby footsteps all, in Zion s deep deeday, Were blotted from the holy ground. Yet dear Is every stone of hers. For Thou wert surely here. Well did the expatriated cup-bearer of Artaxerxes Longimanus, when soliciting the office of Tirshatha of Jerusalem, style the capital of his father-land the place of his father s sepulchres --for no expression could more forcibly characterize the Holy City than the term necropolis--its rocks being everywhere perforated with tombs, and its soil covered with grave-stones. Most ardently does every Jew still desire a...
