Not illustrated. 1906 Excerpt: . . . study, but is equally important for those graduates of the secondary schools whose future occupation does not directly require study of nature. The remaining four theses relate more specifically to German conditions, pointing out that under the present curricula biologic study is excluded from the later years of the course, in which years alone the pupil is sufficiently mature to understand what is taught of the processes of life and the influence of environment; demanding that biologic instruction should be given, say two hours weekly, throughout the nine years of the school course; and making some specific proposals whereby it is thought this can be accomplished. A committee was formed to circulate the theses and the support of about eight hundred scientists was secured. At the session of the association in Cassel in 1903 this committee made a report and proposed that the Hamburg Theses be...
